The Singapore Bioimaging Consortium (SBIC) under the Agency for Science, Technology and Research (A*STAR), and the Duke-NUS Graduate Medical School jointly invite you to the 2015 Singapore Symposium on Metabolic Diseases.

SBIC aims to create a platform for multidisciplinary research for biologists, chemists, physicists, electrical/electronics engineers, computer scientists as well as clinicians to work together on strategic bioimaging projects.

The Duke-NUS Graduate Medical School has a mission to transform medicine and improve lives.

Inaugurated in 2007, the symposium has been a forum to bring together world experts in the areas of diabetes and obesity to share their latest research findings and insights. The event also serves as a platform for the invited speakers and participants to meet and forge collaborations with local scientists. This year, we have 17 confirmed speakers from overseas. They are Yan Chen, Maureen Gannon, Matt Hirschey, In-Kyu Lee, Feng Liu, Jae Bum Kim, Duanqing Pei, Dave Piston, Ling Qi, Philipp Scherer, Minho Shong, Bao-Liang Song, Gary Sweeney, Yu Wang, Claes Wollheim, Aimin Xu, and Xiaoyong Yang. Local speakers would include Bernard Boehm, Koji Itahana, Lei Sun, Walter Wahli, and Feng Xu. The topics to be discussed at the symposium will span from basic science to clinical research and with a focus on diabetes and obesity.

The event will include coffee breaks and lunches.

Besides SBIC and Duke-NUS, the symposium is co-organized by Institute of Molecular and Cell Biology (IMCB), Bioprocessing Technology Institute (BTI) and Genome Institute of Singapore (GIS).

Attendance at the symposium is limited to 200 participants by registration only.
